2011/2012 REPORT ON RESEARCH SCHOLARSHIP & CREATIVE ACTIVITY
Message from the Interim Associate Vice President Academic

The Annual Report on Research, Scholarship and Creative Activity showcases the diversity and depth of research at MacEwan University and celebrates the contributions made by individuals from all areas of our institution. The large number of student co-authors highlights the commitment of the university to the undergraduate learning experience and the incredible research opportunities available to students through the mentorship of our dedicated faculty.

Dr. David McLaughlin

Message from the Research Officer

In 2011-12, MacEwan University’s research portfolio grew by leaps and bounds. The year heralded the development of the university's first five-year strategic plan for research, the establishment of an undergraduate student research initiative, and an increase in faculty and student engagement in a variety of innovative research, scholarly and artistic projects. Credit for these successes is due, in large part, to the much valued achievements of faculty whose inspired scholarship featured in this report:

• contributes to a strong learning environment,
• assists the university to attract and retain high quality students and faculty,
• leads to the establishment of research collaborations and partnerships, and
• responds to the needs of the communities we serve.

On behalf of the Office of the Associate Vice President Academic and Research, we extend thanks to the university research committees for their continuing service and support of research and scholarly projects. Further, for their assistance in preparing this publication, we extend thanks to staff in Research Services, the Faculty Commons, and the administration of our four faculties and schools.

To learn more about faculty and student research or to explore opportunities for collaborations to benefit our communities, contact:

All MacEwan University faculty – sessional, probationary, continuing, professional resource and senior officers – are invited to submit their annual contributions for consideration for inclusion in this report. The selection of scholarship highlights the individual contributions of faculty to their various disciplines. This report is not comprehensive and work may not have been done solely under the auspices of MacEwan University.

Faculty in the Centre for the Arts and Communications (CFAC) continue to demonstrate growth and excellence in research, scholarly and creative practice by offering a diverse range of peer-reviewed scholarly and creative works both here and abroad. The milestone achieved so far is a strong testament to the commitment on the part of our faculty to be at the leading edge of their discipline and to use research and scholarly activity as another important opportunity to engage students in the learning process.

The rise in the number of research and creative activities, however, will not be possible without strategic investments in this area. Within the past few years alone, CFAC has significantly increased its funding support to both full-time as well as sessional faculty, which made it possible for them to work on a wide range of research projects and creative pursuits. Whether it is a critical look into the globalization of communication, a jazz collaboration, or a critical examination of the environmental art practices in the Polar Regions, the net benefits to CFAC, our faculty, and to our students include a higher profile of our programs as well as a learning experience informed by factors including research and real-world professional practice.

The Faculty of Arts and Science knows that research is integral to excellent university teaching – not only allowing students to learn directly from recognized leaders in knowledge creation and application, but also providing opportunities for students to engage directly in the research process.

It has been a productive year in the Faculty of Arts and Science. Over the past twelve months, our faculty members have published 10 books, three edited collections, and 94 peer-reviewed articles. They have delivered 107 academic conference presentations, applied for and received a number of internal and external research grants, and are participating in SSHRC and NSERC research activities. All of this work enhances and supports the teaching activities, and it fosters and promotes the national and international reputation of education at MacEwan University.

This research contributes directly to student education. You will note that many of our students collaborated with faculty members on research publications and conference presentations. The Faculty of Arts and Science also hosted two undergraduate research conferences where our students, joined by undergraduate students from other institutions, presented the results of their research projects. Other students received support from the Faculty of Arts and Science to attend conferences and present their work throughout the country. These research opportunities contribute directly to the quality of our undergraduate classrooms and enhance and enrich the student educational experience.

The Faculty of Arts and Science is proud to take a leadership role in integration of research experiences into the undergraduate classroom – the leading edge of pedagogical innovation.

The Faculty of Health and Community Studies is committed to engaging in scholarly activity to inform and enrich our teaching, professional practice and the knowledge of our disciplines. The examples of scholarly engagement provided on the following pages exemplify our diverse fields of study. We deliver a wide breadth of programming in human services, public safety, nursing, complementary and allied health, and physical education.

Consistent with the scholarship of teaching and learning, but not fully captured in this report, is the significant work faculty have done to develop and implement new courses and programs of study. The Faculty places a strong emphasis on facilitating student learning through innovation and excellence in teaching, curricula and technology integration. For example, the Clinical Simulation Centre provides an environment that promotes the application of theory to practice and is being used as a platform to foster research, interdisciplinary collaboration and patient safety.

Also noteworthy is the involvement of Faculty of Health and Community Studies students in generating and disseminating their scholarly work. This past year, a number of students were invited to present their work at national and international conferences. Additionally, one of our students was the recipient of a $10,000 grant from the Global Health Advisory Steering Committee (GHASC) to enable participation in an international health project during her senior year of studies.

The Faculty values maintaining strong connections with, and being responsive to, our communities of practice. As an example, the Centre for Professional Nursing Education offers a mosaic of innovative continuing education programs grounded in evidence-based practice that serves as a conduit for scholarly engagement. The Faculty’s Visiting Scholar Lecture Series provides another opportunity for faculty and students to be enriched though the dissemination of scholarly work by experts in their field.

The MacEwan University School of Business is actively engaged in the pursuit of research and scholarly activity. Currently, the School’s faculty undertakes research in a wide variety of areas, including: accounting, communication, entrepreneurship, ethics, finance, human resources, international business, leadership, logistics and supply chain management, management, marketing, taxation, and teaching pedagogy.

The School is also home to two institutes and a research centre.

The Institute for Innovation in Management Education (IIME) is a research and development centre created by the School of Business. Initiated in 2009 and operational in 2010/11, the mission of the Institute is to conduct applied research in management education with the goal of advancing management learning and education through collaboration with companies and other academic institutions. The Institute promotes scholarly research in: assessment of professional skills; integrating professional skills; leadership; outcome measurements to support assurances of learning; and the impact of gaming and simulations on student learning outcomes.

Since 2010/11 the RBC Royal Bank Management Development Centre has been using funding from the RBC Royal Bank of Canada to support the implementation of scheduled program enhancements and innovations to the Bachelor of Commerce curriculum. This funding supports the integration of professional skills across the Bachelor of Commerce curriculum, and related initiatives (including funding scholarly research) that will enable faculty to: set performance benchmarks, map curriculum, analyze student results, and validate and share information throughout the university community.

The Institute of Asia Pacific Studies (IAPS) was launched in 1998. Specializing in emerging Asian businesses, IAPS objectives are to: provide workshops and research opportunities for MacEwan University faculty and students; promote scholarly exchanges; host visiting academics who focus on Asia Pacific studies; consult local businesses interested in doing business in Asia; and focus on the globalization of Asia Pacific multi-national corporations and their effect on the business environment of firms in developed countries, particularly Canada.

In addition to the work undertaken by the research institutes and centres, the MacEwan University School of Business is currently organizing the first PRME Canada regional meeting. This event is intended to create a forum for business scholars to share experiences in teaching and research on the integration of the Principles for Responsible Management Education (PRME) into the curricula and scholarship of business schools. Other upcoming events of note include the third MacEwan Business Research Information Exchange Forum (BRIEF) on overcoming constraints in the Alberta economy, and the annual Student Business Conference, which focuses on local success stories (i.e. those who have become leaders in the community and who have successfully connected their businesses to the international marketplace).

MacEwan University’s commitment to building research capacity includes awarding internal project and dissemination grants. Two competitive internal grant funds are administered by Research Council: the Research, Scholarly Activity and Creative Achievement Fund and the Conference, Exhibition and Performance Travel Fund. This internal fund strategy has facilitated research outcomes that include collaboration among faculty members, external grant applications, and engagement of community and industry partners.
